

IP PRAGMATICS

Technology Transfer and Business Development Support

IP Pragmatics is an Intellectual Property (IP) asset management company that facilitates Open Innovation. Open Innovation is creating new ways for organisations to commercialise their intellectual assets. For universities and research organisations IP assets are a means of creating new income streams and attracting commercial partners. This leads to wider public benefit from transferring technology via research partnerships, licensing of intellectual property or new venture creation. For commercial organisations, IP is an asset through which they can create a competitive advantage not just through their own exclusive use but through granting rights to others and non-core IP can be exploited to generate additional sources of revenue.

The service:

- IP audits on individual projects/technologies or across the organisation
- IP training courses for scientists and entrepreneurs
- Technology market assessments
- Licensing support (marketing, negotiation and contract completion)
- Business planning and fund raising support
- Assessment of Technology Transfer office infrastructure, processes and delivery
- Due diligence support (market, competitor and IP analysis) for new opportunity in-licensing or joint venturing
- Strategic plan development and implementation
- Additional business development resource
